College Song

Far away from noisy tumult And the city's throng, Stands our cherished Alma Mater, Worthy of our song.

On her wide and spacious campus Springs of crystal rise, Which for joy and health and beauty She shall ever prize.

Stately pine trees waving o'er her, Proud her guards to be,
Whisper faith and hope and courageFaithful listens she.

CHORUS
Now we lift our joyous chorus, Full of love to thee.
Hail to thee, $O$ Alma Mater!
Hail, O F. M. C.

"For Beauty hideth everywhere, that Reason's child may seek her."

"We may build more splendid habitations,
Fill our rooms with painting and with sculpture,
But we cannot buy with gold the old associations.

"Slow on your walls the shadows creep;
So many hours for food and sleep;
So many hours 'til study tire;
So many hours for hearts' desire."

"These shades are still the shades of gladness."

"Here shines, undimmed, one blissful day."

"The lovely shapes and sounds intelligible,
Of that eternal language, which thy God utters."

"A sylvan scene, and as the ranks ascend,
Shade above shade, a woody theater of stateliest view."

"I cannot but remember such things were, which were most precious to me.'

Flora Macdonald College

Founded 1806

A Retrospect

To those who love bonny Scotland, to those who honor her past and take interest in her freent and future, and whose hearts sing in time with her tales of valor and noble deeds of long ago, the name of Flora Macdonald means worthy womanhood. History records the escape of Bonny Prince Charlie and gives the heroine due acclaim, but fails to mention much of the later struggles of the noble, gallant Flora.

Few know that after Flora Macdonald became the wife of Allan Macdonald she and her husband came to America and made their home in what is now the state of the North Carolina, It was not altogether a new country to these two, however, for they settled side by side with the McLeads, McIntoshes, McKenzies, and others of the old country. On the banks of the Lumber and Cape Fear rivers these sturdy Scots established their homes, holding fast to the loye of Scotland, and the honor and traditions of their race.

It was a hard struggle, but the persevering Scots were ever persistent and successful. The Revolution came, and once more the gallant Flora took a leading part in urging the Scots to hattle for the cause of the house of Hanover. After the war she and her family returned tn Scolland to spend the remainder of their lives, leaving hehind the graves of two of her children under the whispering pines of the new land.

As years passed on the country prospered and grew; but time brought problems to these descendants of the gallant Scots. One serious problem was the question of an education for their children, with far from adequate means.

In 1896 , as if in answer to their call, Rev. Charles G. Vardell came to Red Springs and founded a little academy for girls in the heart of the Scotch settlements. Through his courage, faith, power, strong heart and sturdy perseverance, he established a school where daughters of these people might be trained. The heginning was made through the donation of the people of four thousand dollar and a few acres of land. The first building was erected and school hegun. Day hy day, their leader pushed on until the college grew, the faculty increased, more students came, and the buildings were more comfortable and well equipped.

In 1914 the Scottish Society of America met in Fayetteville, and after consulting with Dr. Vardell, the speaker of the occasion, Dr. James A. Macdonald proposed that the college be made a living memorial to Flora Macdonald, having as its aim to he an institution worthy to bear her name and to he a link between the old land and the new. He stated further that it was fitting that the institution, situated as it was to train the daughters of the noble clans, should be a memrial to the great heroine, "herself a Presbyterian, a college graduate, and a noble example of Christian womanhood."

In a year's time the college was formally named Flora Macdonald, indisso'ubly linking, with its aims and purposes, Scots of the United States and Canada and those of the mother land in Britain.

Since that time it has not failed in any of its purposes, the ideals of its heroine being the ideals of the institution. Outstanding Scotsmen of England and America have heen in touch with it individually and in their societies ever since. It has come to mean a tie of friendship and a band of brotherhood between the old land and the new. In 1925, King George of England, through the Stewart Society, presented a cornerstone to the college, bearing this inscription:
"This tab!et of granite from Balmoral was gifted by His Majesty, King George V, to the Stewart Society for presentation to the Flora Macdonald College, in memory of a Scottish heroine, and as annther link between Britain and America. 1745-1925."

Dear Seniors, a tiny boy am I, Self-conscious, and so very shy. Please let me write this note to youAlthough I'm shy, my love is true. When Sue and Gertrude came to me, I was sleepy as I could be.
Honever, after some contemplation
And a few words of explanation, I realized with right much joy That I was quite a lucky boy.
"Your Mascot," such a surprise, you see, I hardly knew 'twas meant for me.
To be your pal all thro' the year
Is the aim of your mascot, Seniors Dear.

'You are a very devil at everything,
And there is no kind of thing in the 'versal world but what you can turn your band to."
Florence is the kind of person one calls versatile. Her intelligence, athletic abilities and other accomplishments make us all marvel. And, too, she has been endowed with a mischievous, happy-go-lucky manner which enables her to try the hardest of problems and to come through laughing.

It's a pity that anynne as pretty and cute-I use "cute" advisedly-as Carrie should ever have to hother her merry head about such deep subjects (and objects) as pedagogy or over-frantic attempts to trace the clinical significance of hunger pains. For Carrie was made to be set up as queen in some man's heart, making him laugh, as she does us, with her lil' Chawleston brogue and hen-chuckle.

Senior Class Poem

There's a strain of music in the air
That fills our souls with jor.
Each heart resibrates to the tune.
There's mothing to amor,
For the pine boughs are singing new songs with old gladness.
Through four long years we'se gathered here
To study, work and play.
This morning dawned as any morn,
And yet it's a new day,
And the pine boughs are singing new song- with old gladness.
This is the day of all the days,
Our life is just begun.
So, as we leave our records here
For greater things beyond.
May the pine boughs keep singing new songs with old gladness.
The field of life stretches out before.
We've each our work to do.
Let's do it with our deepest might.
With hearts strong, brave, and true,
And let the pine boughs keep singing new songs with old gladness.

Then at the end of life's long road
And with the setting sun,
We'll hear the Master's welcome voice
A. He proclaims, "Well done."

And the pine houghs still singing new songs with old gladness.

Senior History: A Tale

[OLLEGE has the power of rejuvenation. If Ponce de Lenn had known about Flora Macdonald College, he could have saved a world of heart-hreaking agooy and disappointment. We have no Fountain of Youth, but we have a pring. It has the distinctise power of making all who drink there gain flesh at an alarming rate. The sccret of our youth lies not in any fountain, hut in our insigomating life. It supp ies us with superabundant energy; it satisfies, and it gives us the prive to be monchalant under the most trying circumstances.

As an illustration of these marvelous qualities, allow me to we the Class of 1930 . In 1926 they arrived. By "they" I mean the hand of sophisticatell young women who entered the college of youth for better or worse in that memorable year. They were languid, weary, leased with the life which they had experienced in a long existence of seventeen jaded years. They counted in their number valedictorians, basketball heroines, cla s presidents, and cheer leaders who had been the pride of their home towns. There were those whose graduation from high school had heen greatly praised, others whose graduation was a great surprise. Having emerged from the glam:r of commencement, the future defenders of the Blue and Gray plunged into the depths of ennui. In that state they entered college. Now that the fact, are made clear, let me continue with my tale.

One of the first and formost aids to rejuvenation was a certain rule, lights out at ten-thirty o'clock. This role had been provided for the purpose of aszuring that all beauty s'eeps would be taken. Not only does sleep aid in preserving complexions, but also it takes up a large amount of time which young women might spend in horing themselves ant others. On rising in mornings they were invited to the dining rom, where they were at liberty to dispose of all the bacon and grits to be found there. After a short while the Class of 1930 and all other ladies of the student hody were requested to walk for fifteen minutes. Now herein lies a part of the secret of youth. Whi'e mere walking wa, permitted, frolicking like young lambs and running like rabbits were encouragenl. These exercises lightened the spirits and lifted loads of stupid care from the mind. If Ponce de Leon had heen acpuainted with a mysterious fuantity called vitamins and with the benefits of playful activity, he could have hought a hox of grits and a pair of "gym" bloomers. On account of those possessions, the Class of 1930 lived in peaceful bliss. Some authorities declare that having won the baskethall championship and the tennis cup for 1926 -'27 had a great deal to do with their happiness. Thus was passed an eventful uine months. Everyhody was allowed to go home in May its order to secure a little relaxation after a strentous year spent in search of lost youth.

In Septemher, 1927, the Class of ' 30 returned to Flora Macdonald College to continue the process of rejuvenation. It was deemed necessary hy the winent members of the class to instill a spirit of proper reverence for all things Sophomore in the heart and minds of various Freshmen. To the critical and experienced eyes of the Sophomores the new class seemed exceedingly staid and dignified. That would never do. They must act gay and youthful. The Class of 1930 was very willing to aid them in every way posib'e, particularly on stunt night. If is worthy of note that the Sophomores had, by that time, allowed their mophistication to wear thin enough to show a little natural exuberance underneath. Following the excitement of the first several days they hegan to accustom themelse to the new work of Sophomore English against the old background of bacon and grits. Some young ladies added chemistry to their schedules in the gue:t of youth. 'That same year an important discovery was mate. Blase business women who go to the expense and trouble of having their faces lifted could profit by this addition to science. If they but knew it, the chanting three times daily of "Whan that Aprille with his shoures soote," and other excerpts from Chaucer will have the same effect on the facial muscles as the most expensive massage. Certain members of the Class of ' 30 can give personal account of its benefits, and will do so gladly on the receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope. In cave that sulficient progress is not made in a reasonable lengeh of time, the clans "ould advise practicing the "Tableau des Sons," which in found in a little purple book called Prown's "French Diction."

Still in search of vim, vigor, and vitality, the class returned to grace the rank known as Junior. Back to the college that wa, giving them priceless youth they came. This time they were fixed with ambition. The aspiration to win the hockey banner burned in their hearts like a lambent flame. Sufficient to say they won it. That year they adopted as mascot the bulldog. in spite of the fact that many member thought that a little white poodle would he darling. By that phase in their existence ' 30 began to realize how far they had progressed from Freshman days. No longer were they weary with life. It seemed a glamorous adventure. Just over the horizon was what men have sought throughout the ages-youth, real youth that does not assume the airs and ways of age, glorious youth, daring youth. Again we remember the sad failure of Ponce de Leon. The Class of ' 30 knows the secret that he sought so long.

Then as a final polishing up on the work of the previous three years came the Senior year. By the time the subjects of our experiment had reached the final stage in the process of rejuvenation, a bored, discontented person would have to he sought with an anti-aircraft searchlight. Diogenes' lantern would be too out of date to consider using. Nohody has ever heard of his finding anyhody with it at anyrate.

The Class of ' 30 would like to have it generally known that it is a matter of pride with them that they have never yet expressed on any test paper the half of their knowledge. Some wit has said that to tell a secret to a woman is to shout it in the ear of the whole world, but that class now under discussion has always regarded as strictly confidential all matters discussed in class. Therefore, they have oft-times refused to divulge any information that they have learned even to the teachers. From the appearance of child-like guile on their faces one would never guess that they had ever heard of trigonometry and physics. Yet these subjects were very potent in aiding them ta proceed from a pose of blase sophistication to one of hlushing youth.

The process of rejuvenation as followed by the Class of 1930 hay only made use of the principle that the more you know the more there is to know. The girls of that class entered college with a false idea of their own importance. They leave it knowing that they have firmly established a place for themselves in Flora Macdonald's history. They entered feeling old in the ways of the world; they leave feeling full of youth and hope. Truly college has the Dower of reiuvenation.

Senior Class Prophecy

"There zeas an old reoman It ho lived in a shoe, She had so many children She didn't know rwhat to do."

But one day she decided to give them a birthday party and invited all thirtythree of them back for a hig remmion feast. For days she had been getting things ready. The tiny house had not received such a cleaning for five years. It gleamed from heel to toe. The windows were quite open, the laces having been removed and washed, and from each of them poured a cloud of dust. Inside was a veritable fog, created by my vigorous sweeping, for the old lady had set me to work. My arms and back were aching. Why couldn't the old woman afford a vacuum cleaner? But, of course, she was too thoroughly Scotch to consider getting onc for me as long as there was an old broom in sight. However, as the dust settled, I realized that I was just as excited as the old woman over the prospect of seeing my classmates again. Soon the dusting was finished, the laces back in the windows and smoke poured again from the chimneys. The house was in order.

Already the guests were arriving. Annie Ruth Sinclair had driven up in a Sinclair taxi, bringing Jenmie Cassady, Alna MacBryde, Lucile David and Martha Mchimmon. Ammic Ruth had taken over Mr. Ammond's Taxi Service and Sinclair Taxis had become a standard in Robeson County. It is said that Annie Ruth got her start riding Seniors home from town walking period. Jennie was librarian at F. MI. C. As she spoke, I leaned closer to catch her whispered word that Helen Alexander couldn't come. She had gone as a pioneer with Byrd's colonization expedition to the South Pole. Alma MacBryde had a Beauty Shoppe in Red Springs, where she gave special rates to the college girls. She was an acknowledged authority on the care of the hair and her articles in 'Good Looks" of the IVoman's IIome Companion were classics. Lucile was a leader in the Red Springs young married set. Martha had heen for several years associated with Gardner's making new cake recipes, hut it was rumored that she intended to resign shortly and take up matrimony.

Just then a plane landed at our door. Pearl Helm stepped from the cockpit, followed by Ruth Bain; Ora Dell Henderson and Laura Beatty appeared from the rumble seat. Pearl was an aviatrix and had been in the Walter Reid Hospital the past two weeks with a fractured arm. Ruth was head nurse there, having won her laurels in the recent war between Madagascar and Afghanistan. Ora Dell and Laura, jointly famous as inventors of a toothpaste for chickens, were dietitians in this hospital.

Meanwhile Blanche Stewart, Edua Carlson and Curtis Coppedge had arrived from New York. Blanche was quite an eminent critic and her book reviews appeared frequently in the Saturday Reviezi. Ed had really succeeded in journalism and we read her column in the Neze York Sun with great avidity. Curtis was doing welfare work. She told us that Kathryn Hunt and Ruth Harris wouldn't be able to come because they had gone to the South Seas as missionaries to a tribe of tree dwellers.

Another plane had landed with Betty Hicks in the cockpit. It semed that she had marriced a widower with three airplanes and six boys, so Betty was nurse and superintendent of six orphans on her own hook. With her was Irene Bennett, who had been conducting personal tours through France the past three years. Betty brought a radingram from Katherine Alford to the effect that she and Sue lost would be a day late. They were both at Montreat. Katherine had a little gray home on the top of Lookout. Sue had had a successful three years on Broadway, but did not find the life of an artist so free after all, and had given it up to become fishing instructor at Montreat.

There was another group: Nancy Erwin, who had just got out a patent on her new non-removable coffec pot; Janctte Freeman, with a matronly air, saying her life was just one little Boyle after another; an individual in a slouch hat, glasses and flat-heeled shoes-Sunny, who had taken up archaeology with a passion; Georgia Adams and Dot Council, who were doing a Sister Act in Keith's, billed "The Long and Short of It."

Who was this with a limousine and a liveried chauffeur? Why, it was Carrie Shepard, Eunice Wells and four nurses, each carrying two babies. Carrie and Eunice had just returned from their joint concert tour in Europe. Eunice created quite a sensation with her eight babies-all of them under two years old. It was rumored that Eunice adopted them temporarily and returned them to the orphanage at the age of two. Carrie said they had left Nancy Conduff and Shmitt in Europe. Nancy's concert tour was not complete, and Shmitt, who held the American temnis title, was playing an international tournament that day.

Meanwhile, an old Ford had rattled up. Florence Price was at the wheel and with her were Gertrude Crandall, Evelyn Drake and Edith Grace Wildman. Florence was thin and slightly stooped. She had become pactically a recluse, working on her chemical analysis of the suppressed desire in the species Homo Sapiens. Evelyn was chairman of the National lnvestigations Committce and she found her bacteriology a great help in improving sanitary conditions. Gertrude was also in Washington doing social service work. She was back of all this prison reform movement. Edith Grace was assistant to the postmaster-general. She often planed to Florida for the week-end, where she found an outlet for her musical propensities, playing the carillon in Edward Bok's tower.

When the last girl had scrambled out of the Ford, the old woman counted heads and found that all of her children were accounted for. Then:
"She gate them some broth I'ithout any bread,
Ind whipped them all soundly, . Ind sent them to bed."

Junior Class History

8N Septemiker 10, 1927, the arrival of one hundred and ten Freshment caused much excitement among the old girls, especially among the "Big Sister Juniors." Now it must not be supposed that in the midst of all the excitement the Freshmen, the Class of '31, were calm and dignified, even though they made a mighty effort to appear so. But after the never-to-be-torgotten day on which the Sophomores delighted in making them feet "green," and in the dark of night conducted them as immigrants through the gym window on an unusually springy board, they really began to feel rather secure and somewhat at ease. Then began the usual work and play with mont satisfying results in the play department anyway. Namely, the winning of the basketball championship, and thus acquiring the privilege of challenging the faculty team to the game of the season, the results of which they are far too modest to mention.

When again they came to Flora Macdonald, this time as Sophomores, a great transformation had taken place. No longer were they green and timid (at least they did not so consider themselves), but each loyal Sophomore endeavored to produce just such feelings in each wayward Freshman. Especially enjoyable to each Sophomorish heart were the nursery days of the Freshmen, the Sophomore nurses taking care to train their charges in manners meek and humble. Through the means of Sophomore English and other difficulties they weren't exactly comfortable always, but they were greatly cheered by the fact that the Class of '3I won the basketball championship and the athletic banner. And soon commencement time came and they saw their hig sisters receive their diplomas and realized that they were Juniors, and instead of having big sisters they hat little sisters.

Though the Class of ' 31 is an umusually large Junior Class, many of their companions of Freshman and Sophomore days faled to return to help them bear the enormous Junior responsibilities which were suddenly theirs. But together the returned forty-nine of them labored over showing sisterly affection toward their newly acquired little sisters, and placing the purple '31 upon the hockey bamer. Now they are anticipating the next semester with its work and play and Junior-Senior:
